الوحدة 8 Information and Communications Technology businesses could be the best hope for the economic future of Palestine, according to experts inside and outside the country

A recent report said that the ICT sector makes up over 5% of the Palestinian economy

Why ICT? For Mustafa Jawad, the 23-year-old head of an online graphic design company, the answer is simple: 'For an ICT start-up, all you need is a computer and a connection. You can distribute your final product by exporting it to the Internet cloud. There are still problems, though. The main one is a lack of 3G networks in Palestine, because access to the necessary wavebands is not available yet.

Mustafa was always good at art and languages and when he finished school everyone advised him to study English at the university. Instead, he taught himself if how to programme and started making his own software programmes. His first attempt was a game, which was so popular with his fellow students that he decided starting his own company might be a real possibility.

His big breakthrough came when he attended a 'start-up weekend' in Ramallah. He managed to get a small amount of financial support, which gave him time to develop more ideas. Perhaps more importantly, he met other business people, both Palestinian and from other countries. He learnt a lot about the practical side of running a business and about how to get his products noticed.

Like a lot of other young Palestinian business people, he wants to do something positive to help his country, but he stresses that his company isn't a humanitarian operation. It's a business, ' he says, ' and the aim is to get good returns on the investment' On way he believes he can help is to pass on what he's learnt to others even younger than he is. ' I learnt a lot from that start-up weekend. When I go to the next one, I hope I'll learn more, but I'll also be able to advise others.' (7 points)

Read the text and complete the tasks below : (20 points) We often hear people say, 'It's a small world, isn't it?' It's usually when they' ve just experienced one of those strange coincidences that seem to happen in nearly everyone's lives. You know the kind of thing: you're on another country and you run into a person you know from home, even though neither of you knew that holiday in the other was going there too.

People often think experiences like this are evidence of something mysterious happening, some kind of hidden plan outside our knowledge. The scientific explanation is less exciting, and perhaps that's why some people are reluctant to accept it. Coincidences are events that unexpectedly happen at the same time for no clear reason, or finding an unexpected connection between seemingly random things or people. A very common example of the latter is talking to a complete stranger and finding that you have the same birthday, What are the chances of that happening? Actually, the chances are better than you might think, and there's a mathematical way to prove it. It has been calculated that the number of people you need to have a 50% chance of two of them sharing a birthday is 23. And when there are 48 people in a room, the probability goes up to 95%. To put it another way, if there are only 50 people reading these words (and I hope there are more!), one of them will almost certainly have the same birthday

The other part of the scientific explanation for coincidences is simply that there are so many events in people' lives. Just think of the number of people that you have had any kind of connection with during your life. There are probably over 10,000, and the older you get, the more there will be. If you are the kind of person who talks to strangers, you will definitely come across coincidences. Basically, When you think about how complex our lives are, especially nowadays with the Internet, the only surprising thing is that coincidences don't happen more often. A. Answer the following questions (6 points)

الوحدة 8 جميع الفروع Question Number One : (20 points) the Olympic Games الوحدة 8

(1) ______: There are limits to how many sports can be included in the Olympic Games. In the 2012 Summer Games, there were 26, and the International Olympic Committee (IOC) have added two more for 2016 (golf and rugby sevens). There are various criteria that the IOC bases its decisions on, but the most important is probably international popularity. Sports tend to get included if they have a tradition and are played and watched by enough people in enough countries.

This leads to some interesting questions. Why, for example, was baseball included

(3) ______: Of the other sports not (yet) included, one that stands out is squash. It has a long tradition and is played all over the world. It's also more obviously a real sport than some other Olympic 'sports'. In fact, it's more mysterious why certain sports are included. Take speed walking, for example, a long-standing Olympic regular. The rules say that the athletes have to have both feet in contact with the ground at all times, and Symptotegular. The fulles say that the antices have both recent in contact with the ground at an times, and must keep their legs straight. The result, to me at least, looks very silly. 1_{control} : More importantly, $\frac{1}{16}$ breaks one of my two personal rules for judging serious sports ecause it puts artificial limits on what can be done. This is why I can't take any sport seriously if it involves doing something in water that is more naturally done out of water. My other rule is that the scoring has to be objective and measurable, not a matter of opinion.

للوحدة Question Number One :(20 points) The best title: Methods of communication today... 4 الوحدة

TEXT A As a parent, I'm becoming increasingly worried about the effect communications technology is naving on young people. My fourteen-year-old son seems to spend hours every day texting or chatting online, or updating his social media page. He says he's going to do his homework, but an hour or two later still hasn't started it, and I can't help feeling that he's wasting so much time on this instead of doing useful things, or even just being with his friends and communicating with real people. Is all this texting affecting young people's ability to use language properly? Is there a danger that they could become addicted to technology? What potential dangers are out there in the online world? I don't know enough about these new technologies to be able to answer questions like these.

TEXT B Like it or not, today's young people are the connected generation. A recent study in the US found that nearly a quarter of teenagers us social media sites at least ten times a day and 75% own mobile phones. Texting is now the main form of communication for young people. The figures obviously vary between ountries, but the one thing we can predict is that they will continue to rise.

Inevitably, this has led to panic among parents, teachers and other adults. But are these fears justified? Not according to Dr Amy Lehane, who has studied exactly how young people are using technology. 'If you look back,' she says, 'you find the same panic reaction from older people to the growth of the telephone or television. Often it comes from a fear of something they don't understand, but our research indicates that young people are quite capable of telling the difference between the online world and the real world, or between the types of language used for texts and job applications. They're also very aware of the possible negative effects of technology: they know, for example, that it's not a good idea to post a message like 'I'm having a party next Saturday' on a public site.

The results of a new poll show that financial problems have taken over from the environment as the main concerns for young people. the survey asked over 12,000 people aged between 14 and 18 what they were most worried about. the clear 'winner' was 'finding a job', while the environment was only the seventh greatest worry. This compares with similar polls in the last fifteen years, when environmental worries came first.

One of the poll's organizer's commented that the results demonstrated a clear change in attitude. 'It's not just that getting a job is the main worry,' he said. 'also included in the top six worries were getting into debt (6th) and passing exams (4th=). I'm convinced that there's a connection because of changes in the job market, there is more and more pressure on young people nowadays to pass exams and go on to university in the hope of finding a good job. Rising university fees make it inevitable that many students graduate from university with huge debts.'

Other concerns mentioned by large numbers of young people also tended to be personal rather than social, including worries about relationships (2nd), health (3rd) and 'fitting in with peers' (4th=)

_Annette Coleman, director of the green earth organisation, said yesterday that she was 'disappointed, bu not surprised' at the fall in the number of young people concerned about the environment. 'it's not that environmental concerns are less urgent than before - quite the opposite in fact. " it's just that after decades of publicity on topics like climate change, so little has actually changed, a lot of people get the feeling that there's nothing we can do about it, and young people in particular tend to be impatient. of course, the other thing is that in times of economic difficulty, people are more likely to focus on worries that are more immediate and have an impact on their daily lives.

It isn't hard to explain why parents, teachers and older people in general get so concerned about the negative effect young people's use of communications technology. They may be motivated by a wish to protect their children from harm - control them, but throughout history older generations have always tried to put limits on the behaviour of the young. The only difference now is that the Internet is such a powerful force, and older people generally don't n understand this new world of social media and instant communication, so they're unable to control if . The feeling you get is like nothing else, and if outweighs the many negatives, like the pressure, the stage fright and the long periods without work. Unless you're a big star, you never know where the next job is going to come from. Planist and singer, Amina Kureishi: 'Almost anyone can become a musician, but the trick is to make a living from it. I mean, there are singers, there are good singers and there are successful singers, but they're three different things. For most of is it's a life of late nights, long hours practicing and travelling from place to place, being paid just enough to put food on the table. The majority of professional musicians need other incomes, usually from teaching. Charity worker, Ben Harper: 'I can understand why this work comes so high in the list. It's the job satisfaction, isn't it? A lot of people probably feel they'd rather do something to help others than work for a company making money for someone else. But the thing is that for most charity workers, it's just an office job. Even non-profit originations have to be run like businesses these days. On the other hand, we're often told in 'self-help' books that it's a good idea to do things that are outside our comfort zones. In fact, many studies have shown that an important factor in helping people feel positive about themselves is the feeling that they are developing and making progress in their lives. You won't reach your full potential if you only do what you know you are able to do. We all want to improve ourselves, for example by learning something new, becoming more creative or getting fit.

Unfortunately, people often get stuck in their comfort zones and don't feel able to try different things There are various possible reasons for this. They may be afraid of failing or unsure how to begin. Many people think 'This is the way I am and I'll never change', using this as an excuse for not trying something new. Whatever the reason may be, it's sometimes necessary to force yourself to do something you'd rather not do. Once you've made the effort, though, the door to new experiences will be open and you'll probably wonder why you thought it was a problem.

We asked three young business people about their experience of starting up in business. Here is what they said.

* Pete Finn the money to spend on developing new ideas. His advice: I never had any training. I just jumped straight into thousy is open on according to the sent the sent of a long time getting everything perfect and then find the into things. After all, you don't want to spend a long time getting everything perfect and then find the market has disappeared. But my lack of experience meant that I made some expensive mistakes at first. In the end, someone warned me against putting all my profits into developing new ideas instead of keeping some back to pay tax. But before that I'd had some unpleasant moments.

Anita Simons started out making jewelry for friends and now sells it to top fashion shops and direct to the public via her online company. She says: "One of the most important things I've had to learn to do is decide the most effective way of spending money. You need to work out the financial figures and have them checked by someone who understands money. Luckily my parents are both in business themselves, so they advised me to spend more on marketing, less on product development, or whatever. Wherever it come advice is very important."

* Hashem Ali is the nineteen-year-old owner of a company that makes online music videos. His top tips: I think initially the key thing is to understand the market. Work out who your potential customers are who your competitors are, what they offer and how you could do it better. It's easy these days to get professional help with this kind of market research. After that, just be determined and don't give up if things get difficult (which they almost certainly will at some point). Starting and running a business is hard work If you think it is only going to be a nine-to-five job, you should go and do something else."

Read the salaries of top sports players are too high nowadays . الوحدة 9

Are today's young sports stars overpaid? It's an opinion you'll often hear repeated, especially in the world of football. The figures are astonishing. When the Welsh player Gareth Bale joined Real Madrid in 2013, his reported salary was around £250,000 a week or, if you prefer, £13 million a year. So every week he earns as much as the average Real supporter makes in ten years. This may be an extreme example, but there are a lot more footballers around the world earning almost as much.

______ It's a situation that makes some people very angry, but those who are infuriated by it often forget what players have to do to get to the top, and the risks involved. A new book by Wayne Barton tells the story of some of those who fell on the way up. These are young men who achieved the dream of playing for the famous club Manchester United, but only had short careers, often because of injuries. Take young Tony Gill, for example, who was on his way to becoming a regular first team player when 10 he hurt his leg and was never able to recover, or the young forward Deiniol Graham, who broke his arm and never played professionally again.

The list of these tragedies goes on, but the story that stands out is that of Giuliano Maiorana. At the age of 19, he was playing for an amateur team in Cambridge shire, England when he was noticed by 15 one of Manchester United's many scouts, who was searching the lower levels of football for promising young players. At first Giuliano thought, the offer of a trial for the world-famous Manchester club was a joke. It wasn't – only months later, he played his first match at United's home ground, Old Trafford. He still remembers the mixture of excitement and terror he felt. 17 18

Unfortunately, he didn't get on well with the manager, and was soon playing in the reserve team. It was in a reserve match two years later that his knee was badly damaged. Soon, at the age of 24, 19 his career was finished. For seven years after that, he couldn't even watch football. He now works for his family's business back in Cambridge, moving furniture, and says that he now wishes he hadn't been so good at football when he was young.

_____ The benefits of the internet are so extensive that it has positively changed human society in every department. It has made life a lot easier by making information more accessible to all and creating connections with different people all around the world. For many people, the internet has become the fuel of their daily life. However, it has also led to a lot of people to spend too much time in front of the computer, so much that it becomes the center of their lives. This can lead an internet addiction. It is a mental condition characterized by excessive use of the internet, usually causing detriment to the user. Internet addiction is also known by numerous other terms, including problematic internet use, internet overuse and compulsive internet use. Internet addiction is becoming widely recognized and acknowledged, particularly in countries where it is affecting large numbers of people, such as South Korea, where it has been declared a national health problem anxiety and depression. Their lack of emotional support means they turn to the internet to fill this need. There are also those who have a history of other types of addiction such as addiction to alcohol, drugs and gambling People who are overly shy and cannot easily relate to their peers are also at a higher risk of developing computer or internet addiction.

Internet addiction can be a significant threat to one's health and social wellbeing. The most common psychical symptoms of internet addiction are backache, neck pain, and vision problems from staring at the screen. Internet addiction also enforces antisocial behavior. It can lead to the inability to communicate in the real world by depriving the addict of the daily practices involved with the interpersonal communication, which subsequently results in emotional effects like social isolation, aggression and mood swings
